THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

World Government?

Washington, July 13. IT IS natural that the men and women who some months ago launched the movement for a real world government and who were more or less drenched with violence and scorn for the alleged impracticability of their ideas should now turn to justify themselves in the American plan for an international atomic development authority, presented and urged by Mr. B. M. Baruch.

FOR THAT plan, as is pointed out by Mr. Greenville Clark, one of the sponsors of the Dublin (N. H.) conference, which petitioned the General Assembly of the United Nations on the subject, calls for nothing less than a considerable beginning in federal world government. To sustain this contention, Mr. Clark makes a clear and convincing argument.

THE essence of government, he points out, is law—law in the sense of rules binding upon individuals and enforceable by the law-making authority. The American plan contains these essentials. Thus, when Mr. Baruch calls for a world agreement for "renunciation of the bomb" with condign punishments set up for violations of the rules of control which are to be stigmatized as "international crimes," he is speaking of nothing less than binding and enforceable world law. In a word, he is speaking of limited world government.

IT IS difficult to see how this presentation by Mr. Clark can be denied. Unquestionably, the plan is the entering wedge to a world government very much more potent and effective than anything possible under the existing Charter of the United Nations. Under our plan "national authorities" for the control and development of atomic energy are to be "subordinate" to the new authority, and when Mr. Baruch insists there must be a clear demarcation of the scope and duties of such "national authorities," clearly he is speaking of a world government with a federal character.

CERTAINLY, it is natural the plan should greatly encourage those who have contended that "unmodified sovereignty" is incompatible with peace and that "freedom from fear" can be bought at no cheaper price than acceptance of world government. In further support, the Dublin sponsors stress the fact that the American proposals mark a reversal in American policy in that it is a retreat from the paralyzing veto to which we not only agreed at San Francisco but actually originally proposed. Now, Mr. Baruch, for the United States, declares: "There must be no veto to protect those who violate their solemn agreements not to develop or use atomic energy for destructive purposes."

CLEARLY, it is reasoned, this principle will not be limited to atomic energy. Once accepted, it must prevail as to other dread weapons of war. Mr. Baruch himself suggests, to war itself. Considering these things, it is not surprising the original world government advocates cite the American plan as a vindication of their reasoning—a great step toward their goal. Of course, there is a long way to go and many obstacles to overcome. But one hardly can refute their contention that the American policy now points straight in their direction.

EVEN if the American plan is accepted in principle, there remain some tough questions upon which it is necessarily vague. For one, there is the great question of whether the new authority is to be independent of the United Nations or function under it. What seem sound objections are offered to each of these ideas. Again, the Dublin sponsors insist that the only solution is by amendment of the United Nations Charter—so as to permit that organization—at least in respect to atomic power—to function as a world government without the paralyzing veto power. Trenchantly, Mr. Clark asks whether this effort to create a limited world government, as proposed in the Baruch plan, will succeed in time to avert World War III. This, he says, and with reason—is the great question of our time. It transcends all other questions, foreign and domestic.

HULL AND HISTORY

The Cordell Hull letter on the British Loan was a strange document.

In the main, news analysts mentioned only that he pleaded for passage of the loan. They did not attempt to dwell on the reasons he gave for favoring it.

Yet those reasons are significant and enlightening, both for their contrast with Hull's own policies when he was Secretary of State, and for their information about the undercurrents of the present world.

Stripped of a good deal of language, Hull asked for enactment of the loan for the reason that American free enterprise cannot endure in a world dominated by Communism, and that the one hope of curbing the growth of Russian ideology is to bribe England to help us resist it.

Of course Hull did not use those exact words. What he said was that "our own economic system . . . cannot endure in . . . the destructive practices of totalitarian economics," and that "denying financial help to Britain . . . would be promoting economic war."

Proceeding with his argument, he also said: "Our people and our Government have no higher duty than to work . . . against regeneration."

"The British," he went on, "need our financial assistance . . . to rebuild their gravely depleted economy . . . and that . . . the British people will find themselves compelled more and more to regulate and regiment their economic life."

Can this mean anything other than that rejection of the loan would drive England further into the arms of Russia?

"The British Government," he says, "has made it clear that . . . the loan would permit it (to) go forward with us wholeheartedly, etc."

The implications of this are unmistakable. In the own signed words of Cordell Hull, who certainly sees world politics from a point of detachment as well as insight, the world is at a crossroads, with America and Russia in head-on collision, and the decisive factor, to be decided by the British Loan, being the question of whether Great Britain sides with us or against us.

Few viewpoints could be more astounding, from such a source, than this wholesale acceptance of the statements of

Senate Passes A One Year OPA Revival Bill

WASHINGTON, July 13 (INS)—The Senate early today passed and sent to the House the one-year OPA revival bill banning price controls on such basic commodities as meat, milk, grain, gasoline and tobacco.

House Democratic leaders said they will move to send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee to write the final draft of the legislation. An attempt may be made, however, to have the House accept the Senate amendments, thus sending the bill directly to the White House.

Federal price and rent controls would be restored by the Senate bill until June 30, 1947, but on such a drastically restricted basis that some administration spokesmen said they anticipate a veto by President Truman.

STARKEY EMPLOYEE IS HELD FOR COURT

Hearing is Held for Trofe on Charge of Assault and Battery

DISMISS ONE CHARGE

An employee of the Starkey Farms, near Morrisville, which has been harassed by a strike during the past few weeks, was held in $300 bail on a charge of assault and battery, the outgrowth of a picket line battle, when a hearing took place at Yardley on Thursday evening. The one held is John Trofe.

Justice of the Peace George D. Hackett conducted the hearing, during which charges of "threatening to kill" were dropped. Justice Hackett explained that "it is not a crime to threaten to kill" in Pennsylvania.

Trofe is to be tried in August at Bucks Co. Quarter Sessions Court, Doylestown.

The hearing was attended by approximately 200 employees and strikers, it is stated.

The strike is said to have begun on May 26th, when Local 56, Meat, Cannery and Farm Workers (AFL), demanded union recognition, better living conditions for workers and elimination of child labor.

Labor unions from all parts of New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania and Northern Delaware, will participate in a motor caravan tomorrow to the Starkey Farms, it was announced today by Leon B. Schachter, Local 56, Meat, Cannery and Farm Workers (AFL), at Camden.

"The 200 automobiles will carry food, clothing and medical supplies to the farm hands who have been on strike since late May."

"Arriving at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow the caravan will remain by the picket line for several hours during which time food and clothing will be distributed to strikers and speeches will be made by Louis Marcantoni, president of the New Jersey Federation of Labor and by representatives of the various locals taking part."

Two hundred and fifty of the three hundred farm hands employed at Starkey went on strike May 26th demanding union recognition, sanitary living quarters, pure drinking water and the elimination of child labor.

SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1946

SALE OF SURPLUSES

An emphasis on speed is beginning to appear in the activities of the War Assets Administration. In May the sale of surplus properties totaled $233,000,000 and if objectives of the WAA are met, monthly sales at original cost values soon will be boosted to $1,500,000,000, which would bring to the treasury probably $400,000,000 at surplus prices. This speedup is being accomplished through more "site sales," whereby purchases may be made where the goods are located.

Although there has been a rather general demand for the government to reduce its towering stockpiles of supplies as quickly as possible, there is an inherent obligation on the part of the WAA to conduct these sales in a manner which will cause the least disruption of normal commercial activities. Release of some supplies, such as building materials, may serve as a bottleneck breaker in a housing situation which has made this land of plenty in reality a land of untenable, unnecessary and scandalous scarcity.

Other commercial fields, however, do not look upon this release of huge surpluses with fond expectation. The drug industry, for one, could suffer considerably by hasty and unwise freeing of government stores of medicines, although to date most of these drugs have gone into channels—relief projects abroad, new foreign markets, etc.—that have not greatly affected the manufacturers.

Up to the end of May property originally costing the government—which is to say the taxpayers—$17,000,000,000 had been declared salable surplus and at that time approximately 20 per cent of it had been sold. In the disposal of the remainder of the goods, it is perhaps inevitable that private interests will suffer in some instances. But it is the duty of the government to see that such dislocations are held to a minimum.

The government has no place in regular commercial markets.

A-BOMB, LIBERAL ARTS

No one has assumed that an atomic bomb was necessary to make people realize the wisdom of pursuing the study of the liberal arts, but today one of the very scientists who aided in developing the bomb is urging liberal arts education as a means of forestalling its use. The scientist is Dr. Vannevar Bush.

"To no generation," he says, "has a greater duty, a greater privilege been granted than has come to us in this occasion for determining where lies the course of right and good and for assembling good companions to journey upon it. In all our varied society no institution has a nobler share in this venture than the college of liberal arts."

Thus the narrow belief that science embodies all truth is being shattered by the scientists themselves and liberal arts education, with its insistence upon philosophy, history and the study of civilizations, is seen in a new perspective.

HULL AND HISTORY

Winston Churchill in Missouri. The former British Prime Minister drew the same picture, and urged a union of the British and American nations to keep the Russian bear caged.

This is a complete abandonment of the position of President Roosevelt in foreign affairs—a position which Cordell Hull never questioned when he was in power. That position may be expressed in the simple terms that Roosevelt believed the Russian totalitarian economy was not unfriendly with America's system—that the two could and should co-operate.

The war was fought on that basis, and the United Nations program for peace worked out on it. If it is true, in Hull's words, that our system cannot endure in the face of destructive practices of totalitarian economies, then the American policy for twelve years has been a tragic mistake.

Equally correct is the repudiation of the foreign trade policies to which Roosevelt and Hull were committed. Those policies were, in essence, that forms of individual government (and hence, of economy) have little significance, but that complete freedom of trade relations is the cornerstone of peaceful friendship.

Hull not merely makes little point of the alleged promises that Great Britain will tear down her trade barriers if the loan is granted, but on the contrary places the blame for trade wars squarely on "totalitarian economies" rather than tariff and similar restrictions on commerce.

The concept that forms of government are all-important in establishing world peace, and that all other matters, including of course trade relations, are secondary, is one adopted by Woodrow Wilson in working out the League of Nations. Wilson pointed out that the world would not be "safe for democracy" until tyrannical, dictatorial and "total" governments had been eliminated and free peoples everywhere assured of their right to rule their own countries.

Such a concept of course would immediately rule Russia out of any "family" of nations. The Roosevelt-Hull sympathy with Russia being incompatible with this concept, it was abandoned and has stayed abandoned until Hull thus revives it.

In the broader field of the argument, the big question is whether England is still, as Hull seems to feel, open to argument and willing to join the United States in resisting the Russian philosophy and working for free enterprise.

As a matter of fact, the contrary appears to be the case. England has already made up her mind, and she is for reintegration, not free enterprise. Furthermore, Churchill was fired from office by the British electorate because they thought he was too "suspicious" of Russia. The present government is pledged to international co-operation with the Russian Communists, and it also is pledged to exactly what Hull declares to be the deadly enemy of our own system—to "totalitarian economies."

As Hull says, the loan has been urged to "rebuild their gravely depleted economy." But it is to be rebuilt upon the lines of National Socialism, not of capitalism or free enterprise. Already the Bank of England has been nationalized, and major industries such as coal and steel are in the process.

Rapid as is the swing of England to totalitarian economies, it is not fast enough to suit the British people. Strong criticism has been expressed of national leaders for being too slow.

This is a gloomy picture, accepting the viewpoint expressed by Cordell Hull. Many of his chickens—the mistakes of the Roosevelt regime in which he shared—now are coming home to roost.

SLOW FIELDING LOSES GAME FOR LANGHORNE LEGION

Badenhausen Wins After
Rivals Had A 5 to 2
Lead

FINAL SCORE IS 12 TO 5

Schneider Knocked Three
Out of Three and Pitched
Two Frames

LANGHORNE, July 13 — Slow fielding accounted for the Langhorne Legion's defeat at the hands of the Badenhausen team last evening on Playwicky field. Score was: Badenhausen, 12; Langhorne, 5.

The Legion lads had a 5-2 lead until the sixth when the steel-workers scored seven runs. However, many of the Badies' hits were made through the infield which should have been fielded and in addition to this three costly errors were committed.

"Inky" Schneider was the big gun of the Badies' attack with three out of three and in addition to his hitting, pitched the last two frames to hold his team's lead.

Bob Mitchell and Bill Lamb hurried for Langhorne with the defeat being charged to Mitchell.

ST. ANN'S REVENGES DEFEAT BY PROCESSING

With "Reds" Pica leading the attack, St. Ann's took revenge on the Processing team last evening on the Maple Beach field, blanking the fur-workers, 8-0.

Pica had three out of four hits and this hitting coupled with fine pitching on the part of "Danny" Keegan gave the "Saints" their victory, the 25th of the Suburban League campaign.

Carter and Bragg hurried for the Processing boys with Carter being charged with the defeat. The pair held St. Ann's to seven hits while the losers had four hits off Keegan.

"STATUS QUO" REMAINS SAME IN CHURCH LEAGUE

The "status-quo" remained the same in the Lower Bucks Church Softball League after games last night and Thursday as both Cornwells and Calvary scored victories. Cornwells was extended to score a 9-5 win over St. James while Calvary had to go the route to chalk up their verdict over Bensalem, 11-8. In the other game played on Thursday evening, Bensalem came from behind in the late innings to score a 5-4 win over Hulmeville in the first extra inning game of the season, Bensalem winning in the eighth inning.

The Calvary - Bensalem game started off like a whirlwind with the score 8-7 favor Calvary at the end of the second frame. But from then on Maris Hart took over the hurrying chores for Calvary and held Bensalem to one run and 3 hits over the last five frames. During the same stretch Charlie Vansant pitched well for Bensalem, allowing only 7 hits and 3 runs. Beside pitching masterful, Hart also hatted his team to victory with a home run and two singles to drive in five runs. Fritz and Bill Yeagle led the losers with two hits apiece, Fritz getting a double and triple to drive in four runs.

At Hulmeville on Thursday evening, Bensalem, trailing, 3-1 in the last of the 5th scored single tallies in the fifth, sixth and seventh to tie the score and send the game into the extra inning in which they added another run to win out over Hulmeville, 5-4. Bill Yeagle's single scoring Charlie Vansant tied the score for Bensalem in the 7th; and a walk to Lorenzo with the bases full forced in Bill Vansant with the winning run in the 8th.

St. James got off to a 3-1 lead in the first inning against Cornwells on a hit, an error and a double by Wright who later scored on another error. Cornwells scored single tallies in the first, and second then took the lead with a quartet in the third on hits by Mudie, Lamont, and Russ Jones' double, mixed with a couple of errors and a delayed double steal with Whyte scoring. St. James got two more in the 5th to come close, but Cornwells pulled away with two in the fifth and one more in the sixth.

As a result of their victory, Cornwells took undisputed possession of second place, a half game ahead of Eddington-Newport, while Calvary remained at the top of the heap a half-game ahead of Cornwells.

All-Philles To Play Croydon Veterans Here

One of the best semi-pro teams in Philadelphia, the All-Philles, will make its appearance on Leedom's field tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock, meeting the fast-stepping Croydon Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The All-Philles has beaten such teams as Holmesburg, Bridesburg, Vineland, Northampton, and Rising Sun and have a fine season's record. In the All-Philles line-up will be such players as "Jimmy" O'Neill, of Villanova; "Phil" Warner, of Allentown; and "Ed" McCrie, who formerly played for Portland in the Pacific Coast League.

The Schumacher Post team is enjoying an enviable season, having won nine and lost three. It won its last three games in a row beating Camden, Farley All-Stars, of Atlantic City, and the travelling LaSalle Giants.
